"The Dumb-bell"

Two-Reel Century Comedy

Starring HARRY SWEET

HARRY, an ambitious commuter, learns that a man with a baby in his arms has a better chance of getting on the 5:15 train, so he invests in a big doll. When he arrives in his home town he finds his sweetheart, Bartine, waiting for him. So he tries to get rid of the doll. A policeman, who has seen him try to get rid of the doll (thinking it a baby) finds an orphan at the depot and forces Harry to accept it as his own. Harry's sweetheart disowns him when she discovers him with the little orphan.

After many attempts to get rid of the baby, Harry is forced to keep it.

Harry has a tough time as the guardian of this child, and in the end lands in jail. He is brought to court, and at the same time Bartine, finding the baby who has been lost, brings it to court. There the judge patches up the quarrel, and all ends happily for Harry and Bartine.
